HUNTING GIRAFFES .- Giraffes, if not hard pressed, writes an English sportsman, do not go at any very great pace, so that before long we were within one hundred yards of them. Even in the ardor of the chase it struck me as a glo-rious sight to see these huge beasts dashing along in front, clattering over the stones or bursting a passage through opposing bushes, their long, graceful neeks stretched forward, sometimes bent almost to the ground to avoid horizontal brances, and their busby black tailtwisted up. And how easily and with how little exertion they seemed to get over the ground with that long, sweeping stride of theirs! Yet they were going at a great rate, for I felt that my old nag was doing his best, and I could not now lessen the distance between us by an manufactured from the best material, and in the most durable and stylish manner, comprising a great variety of new and handsome styles. I now saw that D. was about to make a push, and, as the horse he was riding was pretty fast, I knew that he would press them into a much quicker pace, and leave me behind altogether, so, reining in at once, I jumped off, and, taking as steady an aim as my arm, tired with flegging would allow, fired at a large, dark colored cow that looked, to me, in good condition. BOOTS, SHOES & BROGANS to which he invites the special attention of coun-The bullet clapped loudly, and I saw her stag-ger, but, recovering immediately, she went on, try merchants and farmers.

All in want will do well to call before though slightly in the rear of the troop. At this moment my friend jumped off close behind them, and gave another cow a shot. I was now a long way behind, but my herse, though slow, possessed good staying powers; so that, by dint of keeping on at a hard gallop, and cutting angles when I could, I again crept up and gave my cow another shot, quickly followed by a third, which brought her to the ground with a crash. She was not yet dead, however, for as I approached, she reared her lofty head once more, and gezed reproachfully at me with her large, sofe. dark eyes. A pany of remorse went through me, and for an instant I wished the shots unfired that had laid low this beautiful and inoffensive creature. But now the cries of my Kaffirs and Massaras, following like famished welves on the blood spoor, broke upon my car; so, stilling the still small voice, I again raised my rifle and put an end to the miseries of my victim, whose head, pierced with a two cunce ball, fell with a thud upon the ground, never to be raised again.

Leaving some of the boys to cut up the meat, I rode on with the rest to look for my friend, whom I found beside another prestrate giraffe which he had killed a little further on. As the one I had shot was the fatter of the two, we left the Kaffirs here and went back to mine.

sep 29-tf F. G. SWAINE. The savor of life is taken out of it when you know that nothing you propose or suggest, hope for or endeavor, will meet with any response but an enumeration of the difficulties that will lie in the path you wish to travel. The difficulty monger is to be met with not only in domestic and social life, but also in business. It not unfrequently occurs in business relations that the chief will never by any chance receive without many objections, and much bringing forward of possible difficulties, anything that is brought to him by his subordinates. They at last cease to take pains, knowing that no amount of pains will prevent their work being dealt with in a spirit of ingenious objectiveness. At last they say to themselves: -"I'he better the thing we present the more opportunity we will have for developing his unpleasant talent of eb jectiveness and imaginative power of inventing difficulties."

THE CAPTURE OF HYENAS.—The following mode of tying byenss in their den, as practiced in Afganistan, is given by Arthur Connolly, in his "Overland Journal," in the words of Afghan chief, the Shirkaroe Synd Daoud: "When you have tracked the beast to his den, you take a rope with two slip knots upon it in your right hand, and with your left holding a felt cloak before you, you go boldly, but quietly, in. The animal does not know the nature of the danger, and therefore retires to the back Agent of the Agent of the SUEANCE COMPANY. part of the den, but you may always tell where his head is by the glare of his eyes. You keep moving gradually toward him on your knees, and when you are within distance throw the cloak over his head, close with him, and take care he does not free himself. The beast is so frightened that he cowers back, and, though he may bite the felt, he cannot turn his neck round so as to hurt you; so you quietly feel for his forelegs, slip the knots over them, and then with one strong pull draw them tight up the back of his neck and tie them there. The beast is now your own, and you can do what you like with him. We generally take those we catch home to the krall, and hunt them on the plain with bridles in their mouths, that our dogs may be taught not to fear the brutes when they meet them wild."

> The ladies in Russia are very anxious to marry, because they have no liberty before marriage. They are kept constantly under the paternal eye until given up to their husbands, and then take their own course. Almost as soon as a girl is born, in the better ranks of society, her parents begin to prepare the dowry she must have when she goes to her husband. she must have when the goes to her husband. She must furnish everything for an outfit in life, even to a dozen new shirts for her coming husband. The young man goes to the house of his promised bride and counts over her dresses, and examines the furniture with his own eye before he commits himself to the irrevocable bargain. In high life such things are conducted with more apparent delicacy; but the facts are ascertained with more apparent accuracy, the business being in the hands of a broker or notary.
